Compared with the nations of Europe, America is decidedly young. Unless we have lost all our youthful qualities during the past two years, which is doubtful, we can expect our national vigor and optimism, now under a cloud, to reassert itself sooner or later, and pull us out of the depression. The remarkable ability of Americans to come back can be illustrated by the present example of Arkansas, and especially by the little community of England in that state.

A few months ago, it will be remembered, when the drouth was upon the middle west, all sorts of pessimistic stories came out of Arkansas. It is true that conditions were bad, but it now becomes evident that predictions for the future were undoubtedly too pessimistic. It will be remembered how many of our busy statesmen asserted that Arkansas must have something like the dole, that the state was in a bad way and might never recover without assistance from the federal treasury for feeding and clothing the citizens of the drouth stricken belt.

Well, the Red Cross took care of the drouth-stricken regions and 12 months have rolled by. Arkansas is blooming like a rose. Only a few days ago, writes Thomas Fauntleroy in an unusually interesting article in the Sunday New York Times, the little community of England, scene of bread riots a few months ago, held a country-wide celebration, the occasion being the shipping of a truck load of food from the people of the country to the unemployed in a neighboring Oklahoma community. Mr. Fauntleroy adds that the community has the most remarkable crops within the memory of the oldest inhabitants, and the pessimism and despair has given way to optimism and hope for the future.

Reports of the department of Agriculture in Washington confirm the glowing picture of the change of conditions in Arkansas. Instead of devoting all their time and soil to cotton this year, the citizens of the drouth-stricken area paid some attention to the raising of food crops. Clubs and civic organizations in various parts of Arkansas during the past winter carried on campaigns urging the people to plant food crops so that there would be plenty to eat in the winter of 1931-32. The people responded, and the result is that Arkansas people have food for themselves and some to spare for their less fortunate neighbors. Even better is the fact that there has come a changed spirit and that the people are now confident of the future. As Mr. Fauntleroy put it, "All this is aside from a bumper cotton crop. Though cotton is now selling on the Memphis board at the lowest figure since 1915 and the prospect of a still lower figure is in sight, the people are not discouraged. They are proud of their gardens and their fields of hay and corn."

Best of all, the people of

Here's What
The Chest Is Working For

Completing its first year under the system of social service reporting suggested by the Mangold report of last summer, the Community Chest of Santa Clara county has just issued a report of the work accomplished by its 23 agencies. The report covers the period from July 1, 1930 to June, 1931.

The report indicates activities far in excess of those anticipated and for which budget allotments had been made. Indications are that even heavier burdens will be placed upon the Chest during the coming season.

Family relief agencies aided 6,857 families or about 25,000 individuals.

Agencies giving temporary relief aided 17,476 persons.

Five thousand and 25 patients were given health care by the Good Cheer club.

A daily average of 325 children were cared for by the three child caring agencies.

It is difficult to summarize the work of the character-building agencies, but the membership of 5,660 boys and 1,838 girls in these organizations indicates the breadth of their work.

The family relief agencies are the Red Cross and Disabled American Veterans of the World War, the Salvation Army, the Sisters of the Holy Family, the Jewish Agencies, the Catholic Relief and Children's Aid, and the Volunteers of America. They gave material aid to 3,058 families and otherwise serviced 3,799 families.

The temporary relief agencies, the Red Cross, D. A. V., the Salvation Army, the Volunteers of America, the Y. M. C. A. the Y. W. C. A., and the Jewish Relief, had an unusually heavy program because of unemployment last winter. They furnished 17,476 persons with 28,016 meals and 7,907 lodgings.

Four agencies, the San Jose Day nursery, St. Elizabeth's

Day Home (conducted by Sisters of the Holy Family), the Home of Benevolence, and the Children's Aid Society took care of 3,658 children, a daily average of 325. A total of 128,035 meals were served and 66,063 day's care provided. Not included in these figures were the children cared for in private homes by the Children's Aid society.

The principal health program is done by the Good Cheer Center. It cared for 5,025 patients in their homes, 7,834 calls being made. Two

STEVE MERRILL
THRILLS CROWD
SUNDAY NIGHT

The first concert to be given by Stephen Merrill, one of the winners of the 1930 Atwater-Kent national radio audition, was at his home town Congregational church Sunday evening.

To a crowd which packed the church to overflowing—a bigger crowd than has ever been in the church to hear anybody before—Steve sang two groups of songs, which were enthusiastically received.

The first group consisted of sacred songs including "He Shall Give His Angels Charge," "Fear Ye Not O Israel" and "Thanks Be To God."

The second group consisted of classical numbers which included "Dawn," "Life," "Retreat," "Where'er You Walk" and "Today." Miss Marjorie Johns, who accompanied him at the piano, played during the intermission two numbers by Chopin, "Nocturne" and "Valse."

Carl Noonan, KPO manager, was a guest at the church Sunday night.

National Government Under MacDonald Supplants British Laborite Cabinet—Gifford Organizes Campaign for Relief in America.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

Stanley Baldwin

GREAT BRITAIN'S economic and financial crisis has resulted in the formation of a national or coalition ministry which is expected to hold office for only a few months and in that time to work out the grave problem of balancing the budget. Prime Minister MacDonald found himself caught between the two fires of the demand by the Conservatives and Liberals for reduction of the dole and the absolute refusal of the trades union congress to accept that expedient for the financial relief of the country. Eight members of his cabinet of Laborites resigned, so Mr. MacDonald gave up the struggle and hurried to Buckingham palace where he handed to King George the resignation of the entire ministry. The king, who had rushed back from Scotland, called Stanley Baldwin, the Conservative leader, and Sir Herbert Samuel, acting leader of the Liberals, into conference, and it was decided that a national government should be formed.

At the suggestion of Mr. Baldwin, Mr. MacDonald was persuaded to resume his place as prime minister, and a cabinet, small as in war time, was selected, these being the members:

Laborites—Mr. MacDonald, Philip Snowden, J. H. Thomas, and Lord Sankey.

Conservatives—Stanley Baldwin, Neville Chamberlain, Sir Samuel Hoare, former chancellor of the exchequer, and Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister.

Liberals—Sir Herbert Samuel and the marquis of Reading.

Eight other ministers without cabinet rank were appointed.

In a radio address Mr. MacDonald defended the proposed reduction of the dole.

Mr. MacDonald is denounced in some Labor circles as a traitor, and elsewhere is being hailed as almost a hero. He seemingly has sacrificed his personal ambition and perhaps his political future to help his country out of its financial distress.

The London Daily Herald, chief organ of the Labor party, charges that the fall of the Labor government was dictated by the United States Federal Reserve bank. A condition to the granting of further credits, it says, was a drastic reduction in the dole. This was flatly denied by Snowden and others. High officials in Washington said they had not heard that an additional loan had been asked of the federal reserve system by the British government. It was their belief that the coalition ministry would be able to rescue the nation from its difficulties.

WITH headquarters in the great building of the Department of Commerce in Washington, Walter S. Gifford, head of the American Telegraph and Telephone company and now director of national relief, is rapidly getting ready his organization for the strenuous work of combating unemployment and distress throughout the country. His able assistant is Fred C. Croxton, acting chairman of the emergency committee on unemployment which has been busy since last fall gathering information. And the 52 members of the advisory committee named by President Hoover representing all sections of the land, are rendering such service as they can. Then, too, there are many capable volunteers, and also hired experts to handle technical matters in connection with the great campaign for funds that is planned.

Plans worked out by the President and Mr. Gifford call for complete organization of the entire country for the relief task the nation must face this winter. All relief agencies are to be welded into one system so there will be no duplication of effort, and no section of the country will be neglected. Under the direction of the Washington organizations communities which have not yet begun to prepare for the winter are expected to make new efforts to obtain funds with which to supply local needs.

The President and Mr. Gifford were in agreement that the relief load must be carried by combined state and community effort. While the federal government will aid in organizing relief activities and in the drive for funds, every attempt is to be made to frustrate all attempts to pass "dole" legislation. Senator Couzens of Michigan has generously offered to donate $1,000,000 to the jobless of Detroit providing $8,000,000 can be raised from other sources.

In the effort to avoid a winter shortage of food in drought sections the American Red Cross is sending fall garden seed to tens of thousands of rural families.

SEVERAL congressmen, speaking on behalf of American shipping interests, are protesting against the deal made between the federal farm board and the government of Brazil, because the 25,000,000 bushels of wheat which will be traded for coffee will be transported to Brazil in Brazilian vessels. Chairman Stone of the farm board said nothing could be done about it, as negotiations had been closed. Representative Frank L. Bowman of West Virginia declared the action of the board in allowing Brazil to arrange the transportation was a "colossal economic blunder" and in violation of the spirit of the merchant marine act. The American Steamship Owners' association sent a protest to President Hoover.

Probably, as Mr. Stone says, nothing can be done in this instance, but it is more than likely that if the board makes sales of wheat or cotton to China and other countries, American shipping interests will be protected.

Henry Ford

EVERY family man employed by the Ford Motor company at Iron Mountain, Mich., will have to cultivate a garden next year if he expects to retain his job. Such is the edict of Henry Ford, who thus hopes to relieve his employees from the effects of the temporary business depression. He believes other companies throughout the country will take similar measures. He has been studying the problem while on a tour of inspection and is convinced there is no use trying to help men who do not try to help themselves by raising vegetables for their families.

"When the people of our country learn to help themselves they will be benefited far greater than they would be by unemployment insurance, as is being suggested in congress," Ford said. "If our agriculture plans are adopted throughout the country such a thing as the dole system need never be thought of."

Family men who have no available space for gardening, Ford said, would be supplied with land by the company, which would provide expert advice for those not familiar with garden work. He added that an investigation would be started soon to determine which of his employees needed instruction.

THERE were indications that the campaign in the Southwest to force the price of crude oil up to $1 a barrel would be successful, but the fields of Oklahoma and east Texas were still kept closed tight by the militia, and those of Kansas were shut by order of the state public service commission. Several big oil companies made overtures to Governors Murray and Sterling, but both said the lid would stay clamped down until all the major purchasers met the price of $1 a barrel. Meanwhile the prices paid for oil moved steadily upward in the states named, and also in Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Louisiana and Arkansas.

California refiners profited by the shortage caused by the shut down, shipping gasoline in large quantities to the east coast. A curtailment program is in effect there too, and producers are drawing from the storage tanks to supply the eastern markets.

DAY by day the flood disaster in central China grows worse. Dispatches describe the terrible conditions in the valley of the Yangtze where all the country except the hilltops is under water. Junks sailing unobstructed over hundreds of towns and villages. Uncounted thousands of the inhabitants have drowned, and hundreds of thousands of others are starving or dying of pestilence. On every bit of land that is still unflooded are throngs of refugees without food, drink or shelter, and most of them beyond help. The three great cities of Hankow, Wuchang and Hanyang are in desperate straits threatened with complete destruction, and Anking, Kiukiang and other cities are little better off. The tea crop of central China has been utterly ruined.

NEW YORK city, aroused to fury by the exploits of its gangsters which rival or surpass those of Chicago's gunmen, has started on a campaign to rid itself of those things. The police force was told to arrest all known or suspected criminals. A great mass meeting was held in Madison Square garden and the speakers, who included Tambridge Colby, blamed prohibition and crooked politics for the gang outbreaks. The city administration was bitterly denounced, Mayor Walker coming in for some hard slaps.

SIDRO AYORA, President of Ecuador since 1929, resigned immediately after his cabinet quit their posts as the aftermath of a "peaceful revolt" among the officers of the Chimborazo garrison. Before stepping down, Ayora appointed Col. Larrea Alba as minister of government and he assumed the Presidential powers in accordance with the constitution. Ayora took refuge in the United States legation in Quito.

S. Vaulcin

OPPONENTS of prohibition are rejoicing in the acquisition of an important recruit to their ranks. He is Samuel Vaulcin, steel magnate and locomotive builder, one of those captains of industry whose opinions are generally held in high respect. For years Mr. Vaulcin was a strong supporter of the dry law on economic grounds and because it abolished the saloon. But he now declares the speakeasy has nullified the benefits of the law, the attempts at enforcement are failures, and the Eighteenth amendment should be repealed. The national treasury should collect much of the millions now going to the bootleggers, Mr. Vaulcin avers, and he supports, to some degree, Senator Morrow's plan which would restore to each state the power to enact its own dry laws.

Somewhat the same plan was advocated by Senator Robert J. Bulkley of Ohio in an address before a big Democratic rally in Kenton, Ohio, in which he declared the right to control liquor traffic should be returned to the sovereign states. Outlining a plan for resubmission of the Eighteenth amendment to the states, Bulkley said he hoped such a plan would be placed before constitutional conventions rather than state legislatures. He urged a plank for the Democratic party "which would take prohibition out of national politics once and for all."

Incidentally, Senator Bulkley is still looked upon as a possibility for the Democratic nomination for President.

C. H. Van der Leeuw

THREE hundred economists, industrialists, labor leaders and government officials were present when the world social economic congress began its sessions in Amsterdam, Holland. In the chair as presiding officer was C. H. Van der Leeuw, an eminent Dutchman who is president of the International Industrial Relations association. There were delegates from 20 countries, 35 of them representing the United States.

The topic for the first session was "The Present Paradox—Unemployment in the Midst of Economic Progress," and, to start with, a five-year world prosperity plan was outlined by Dr. Louis L. Lorwin of the Brookings Institution in Washington. He said that a general five-year moratorium on all war debts and reparations payments was the first necessary step to give the world a breathing spell from what he termed its most aggravating and dangerous postwar problem. Such a moratorium would leave open final settlement of the debts and reparations question, he said, but the presumption would be in favor of further extending it, and a final cancellation if the effects proved as beneficent as expected.

An entire session of the congress was devoted to hearing first hand reports from the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics concerning the experience of the Russians in economic planning.

PROHIBITION DIRECTOR Woodcock, after investigation of charges, has ordered all dry agents to cease the employment of women in gathering evidence, either as informers or companions. He says it is unnecessary, thereby disagreeing with McCampbell, the New York enforcer.

COLONEL AND MRS. LINDBERGH arrived safely at Kasurigaura naval base in Japan, near Tokyo, and proceeded to the capital where they were accorded a tremendous welcome by government and citizenry alike. They planned to remain in Japan about two weeks and to fly from there to China. Afterwards they may go on to Manila, and it is thought they are likely to continue on around the world. However, the colonel declared in Tokyo they had no fixed plans.

EVANGELISTS WILL HOLD MEETINGS AT CAMPBELL THEATER

The Shultz-Knight evangelists, who have for the past several days held a tent meeting at South and Margaret streets in San Jose, will open a two-weeks' campaign in Campbell for the John 3:16 Mission. Mr. and Mrs. J. Bondon, KQW entertainers, will take part in the program, playing and singing several numbers at each meeting.

The campaign will begin Sunday, Sept. 6, at 3 p. m. Meetings will be held every day in the afternoon and at 7:30 in the evening, at the Campbell theater. John Gamon is the organizer and leader of the local mission, and was instrumental in obtaining the evangelists for Campbell.

CURRENT COMMENT

Arkansas have brought about this improvement in conditions without relying on any form of the dole. It is true that money was borrowed for seed, but the people are paying this back; many in fact have already repaid the loans. The citizens of Arkansas have relied after all not on the Farm Board or benefits from the public treasury, but on their own industry and fine American spirit. The two United States senators, and the Arkansas delegation in Congress, have a right to be, and doubtless are, proud of the gallant and successful fight put up against adversity by their fellow citizens during the past 12 months.

CAMPBELL TRIMS MOTOR MARTS IN FAST GAME SUN.

The Campbell baseball nine gave the local fans a big thrill Sunday when they defeated the Motor Marts 8-7, in a fast game on the local diamond.

During the first four stanzas it looked like a goose-egg for Campbell, while the visitors had already chalked up seven runs. The remaining five innings went to the local boys, who not only held their opponents but piled up the eight tallies necessary to win the game.

Almost sure victory for the visitors was turned into a rout when the Campbell lads made six runs in the fourth frame. Campbell is scheduled to meet the Y. M. I. s next Sunday.

BURGLARS ENTER.
ROB HOME OF MR.
ND MRS. W. DIXON

Last Tuesday evening two armed men entered the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Dixon in the Hedegard tract, as they sat in their living room, and robbed them of all the cash in the house.

The thugs entered through and open window and covered Dixon with a pistol, while the second bandit kept watch at the window. Fortunately,
Mr. Dixon had but six dollars handy, and the holdup men made a rapid retreat as soon as they had the money.

The Dixons were able to furnish excellent descriptions of the men, and Coupland and Evans, together with deputy sheriffs, are on the lookout for them.

24 PINTS OF PEACHES
canned with 5½¢ worth
of electricity... a cool,
easy way to put up fruit

Fruits retain their natural color, shape, and flavor
when canned with the electric range.

Then, too, there is no boiling or stewing over a hot stove. You simply prepare the fruit in the usual way, pack it in jars with syrup, screw the lids on lightly and place the jars in the oven of the electric range. The oven heat is automatically kept just right. At the end of an hour you remove the jars from the oven and screw the lids tightly.

By actual test, the cost for electricity for canning 24 pints of peaches was 5½¢, at a 3½¢ K.W. hour rate, using 1½ K.W. hours. The cost of canning an equal amount of other fruits was about the same.
Besides giving you cool, easy canning, the electric range cooks food perfectly. You spend minutes in the kitchen instead of hours, because of the automatic features.

Stop in at our office and see the new electric ranges.
Then select the model you prefer. Special terms make it easy.
